(Record found so far through Newspaper and concerned individuals)

About the APSS

The Association of Political Science Studies (APSS) is politically independent, scholarly association, established in 2001, supporting and encouraging the training, research, dialogue, roundtables and national cooperation of political scientists, theorists, practitioners, policy makers, journalists, researchers and students either in formal education or those interested in political issues and other intellectuals, across Nepal and beyond. The APSS has nearly 2,100 members across the country, has working relationships with Nepalese political parties, relevant departments of Universities and different academic and professional associations and unions. It has now 26 district chapters, and 43 locally-active groups have been affiliated to pursue APSS policy and programme implementation process. Formally in 2006 the APSS got registered at local authority of Government with an approved Charter, the APSS is non-profit making and non-religious Association.

Crisis of democracy in Nepal due to different unconstitutional and undemocratic activities of the state, conflict among or between political forces arose seriously. To draw attention of the students and other social walks in day-to-day political activities and their effects, pressurize the state not to go towards any undemocratic process, and develop a common agenda towards conflict management and resolution, APSS organized different workshops and seminars.
